A licensing solution for a connected world

The Collaboration License was created to help you maintain compliance while engaged in joint projects involving your colleagues and employees from other RightsDirect-licensed organizations. The Collaboration License — an amendment to your Multinational and/or VG WORT Digital Copyright License — authorizes project team members from your company and another RightsDirect-licensed organization to share published research and other content with one another as part of their collaboration within a project-specific workgroup.<sup>1</sup>

Together, these licenses complement your existing publisher agreements and subscriptions and reduce the administrative burden of tracking and managing individual copyright permissions, so your employees can focus on the business of innovation, and collaborate in compliance with copyright.

<sup>1</sup> All authorized uses under the Multinational Copyright License and Collaboration License are subject to the general restriction that the authorization does not include any right to create a library or collection intended to substantially replace a user's need for a particular work.
