Copyright Awareness and Attitudes

Companies are sharing copyright policy more frequently, but employees are still sharing published content. 79% of employees claim to be aware of their company's copyright policy. However, according to Outsell's newest research, employee attitudes and behaviors don't always align with policy awareness.

don't strongly agree that copyright infringement has serious risks and implications believe that sharing is permitted if the information is obtained on the open web or in print feel that the issue of getting permission creates obstacles to sharing information

don't strongly agree that they think about copyright issues before forwarding information

Why It Matters?

While the sharing of information with co-workers supports collaboration and drives innovation, the sharing of published information without obtaining the necessary subscriptions, licenses, or permissions also carries enormous potential risk. Ordinary content exchanges that come so naturally in the digital world can increase the risk of copyright infringement, costly lawsuits or settlements, and result in damage to brand reputation.

By taking steps to balance employee reuse of published content with a strong compliance and licensing program, your company can leverage today's rise in content sharing to help support collaboration and drive innovation.
